Nationally televised press coverage in Cameroon of a reception celebrating the donation of computers and teaching technology to IFORD (a Master's level demographic training center for scholars in Francophone Africa) as part of the outreach work done by Parfait Eloundou-Enyegue and Sarah Giroux. Materials were donated by Cornell University, with the support of the Hewlett Foundation, for establishment of a research and data center for scholars working on demographic issues. This project is part of a larger effort (CARE-IFA) led by Dr. Eloundou-Enyegue to boost the quality and quantity of demographic research among scholars in the region.
